Intro

As another year in Guilford history passes by we discovered the many things that make us who we are. Some have been expressed through words, Stories or Poems others took the shape of paintings, photos or sculptures. All have been art.

This year The Quaker has tried to capture some of this art. We have spent time recording the many forms of art throughout campus, and have integrated this theme within the book. This has allowed us to not only capture the essence of everyday Guilford, but also the underlying creativity of the student body. We hope that this year's Quaker will display all that Guilford represents.

This edition of The Quaker is dedicated to two inspiring professors: Carol Stoneburner and Becky Gibson, who contributed so much time and energy to making Guilford a better place. Both women were actively involved in making the Womens Study program here into what it is today. After many great years here at Guilford both these women are retiring. Dedicating this book to them can not even begin to share what it is they have gained from teaching here at Guilford or what students shall take with them from having these women as a part of the Faculty.

Carol Stoneburner first came to Guilford in 1970 and started working in Womens Studies in 1974. She helped in creating the Women's Study Program and the Faculty Development Program. She has taught many courses including, Images of American Women, Women and Work, Human Sexuality, Women in American Religion, Feminist Theology and the list goes on. She has truly been a wonderful asset to Guilford and will be missed

Becky Gibson has been a full time professor at Guilford since the fall of 1988. She has also made many contributions to the Women's Study Program as well as helping many students learn to write better than they could have thought possible. She has taught, English at every level specifying in things from Self-Image in Women's Writing to Modern Poetry. She will also be greatly missed next year.

The Quaker would like to thank you on behalf of the Student Body for dedicating yourselves to Guilford and The Women's Studies Program.

“ I came to Guilford because I agree with the missions and visions of the college and I have been allowed and encouraged to be creative here - especially in the two areas that mean a great deal to me personally - the study of women and the on-going development of the Faculty.”

“ I have stayed and worked at Guilford because it is a college that has high ideals and struggles to meet them. This takes personal and institutional courage. My concern is that the real pressures of the moment will call for more courage instead of less.”

- Carol

“Guilford college gave me the opportunity to do exactly the kind of teaching I wanted to do, that I’m suited for--small class discussion and individual work with students. Innovative teaching is encouraged; I loved creating my own courses teaching them in my own way as well as being around creative faculty! (My daughter graduated from Guilford and that is the main reason I encouraged her to come here.) “

- Becky

CHAOS 2004

Every year at the beginning of August there us a group of very excited Students at Guilford and it is not just the incoming first-years. Sure, they are ecstatic to be starting college, but many of them are nervous about adjusting to college life. Luckily for them, the CHAOS Leaders carry enough infectious enthusiasm and excitement with them to make the transition easier and a bit silly. Each summer a group of CHAOS Leaders spend a hectic week, preparing fun activities, entertaining shows and ice breakers to welcome the first-years into the Guilford community.

Knowing that this year's first year class was the largest ever. The CHAOS Leaders had an extra bit of pep in their already intoxicating attitudes. New traditions were developed like the New Student Dance and juggling outside Kent's House. Meanwhile the class of 2007 resurrected the old tradition of signing The Book of Admission.

This year's CHAOS program was an enormous success with the excitement spreading from the CHAOS Leaders to the new students, making them feel right at home.

First I'd like to start with the thank you's. Thanks to my family and parents for helping me get a college education, I won't squander it. Thanks to my friends for being there for me either in North Carolina or Pennsylvania. Thanks to Sara for everything, In many ways you've defined my Guilford experience. These last four years have been heavily educational, but I think that school teaches us life more than it teaches academics. I've grown from a teenager to a much more responsible adult here. Guilford will always hold a special place in my heart....insert inside joke here:

I am at a place in my life that I never thought I could reach. There were many obstacles that I had to face and I overcame them all. God has allowed me to be strong and have good intentions towards everything that I do. I stay strong in my faith and I know that I will always come out on top. I would like to thank my sister and best friend, Amanda, for always being there for me when everyone else turned their backs on me. I wish you success in everything you do. Jamey, my wonderful boyfriend, you have loved me continuously for a long time and knowing this has always made me feel special. I am in love with you and always will be. To my parents, all of you have contributed to the person that I am and I would not be me without any of you. Tamia, I think of you consistently throughout my day and I want you to know that you will always "Auntie Ronda's" angel. I love you, girl. Kenyona (Sunny) Matthews

Announcement by President Clinton June 14, 1997

The greatest challenge we face...is also our greatest opportunity...Can we fulfill the promise of America by embracing all our citizens of all races...can we become one America in the 21st century?...Money cannot buy this goal, power cannot compel it, technology cannot create it. This is something that can come only from the human spirit.

If ten years from now people can look back and see that this year of honest dialogue and concerted action helped to lift the heavy burden of race from our children's future, we will have given a precious gift to America.

What can I say? I am really grateful for my education, and have my kind parents and excellent teachers to thank for that. There is so much out there to discover and love. I also want to give my appreciation to all my friends, those who are here and those who have left, because you have made college a wonderful experience for me. And Drew, you have been so special and important to me in college that a few words cannot properly express it, and I know you will be in the future. I just wanted to say thanks to all who made my journey at Guilford a memorable experience. First thanks to my parents who made it possible for me to be here. Oh my roommate, remember our experience with "we had em," waking up on the wrong alarm clock, CC+, X-box's, and all Jordans worn between us, thanks for keeping me sane throughout these four years. What's up to Kings of Comedy. To Guilford Basketball, I did not get along with my first coach and senior year I got on the injured reserve list. Thanks to Senate, AACS (now BUS), Campus Life, Project Community, the Career Center, CHAOS, Frank Fellows, mentors, and professors that have helped me grow and develop into a well rounded person. I wish the best for Guilford and to the graduating class of 2004

I'm so glad I transferred to Guilford after my freshman year at Oberlin. I have grown so much while I've been here. I appreciate all of the guidance I've received from the faculty (particularly the Philosophy department) and I will always remember fondly the feeling of what it means to be a part of the college. I know that the true friends I have made here will remain forever a part of my life. As I move on to Japan and law school, marriage and family, I'm sure I will continue to reflect on things I have learned at Guilford, things that I know have made me a better person.

"It's been a long hard journey from San Diego CA to North Carolina. What sticks in my mind as when I was inquiring about a school here in North Carolina and I stumbled on Guilford College. Mrs. Charlotte Hamlin was my correspondent at the time. We exchanged several letters and notes about the school. So when I finally arrived in North Carolina after a year of inquiring that fall of '99, I was sitting in an interpersonal communication class. Guess What! Mrs. Hamlin was my instructor. Mrs. Hamlin instructed us to stand up to introduce ourselves so I discovered that we had already met over a year ago. It was quite an experience to see the face of the person behind the letters or the first time. This was an experience I will never forget. I sometimes see her on campus and I always mentioned that special moment finally meeting her." It doesn't matter how far you are that two sails will soon meet.

Bang Bang

Noah Forman was interviewed about his thoughts while in Bang Bang Your Dead. His Character was Josh, The shooter. Interview by: Sarah Levenson

Q: How did what you thought change during the course of the production and final performance of the play?

A: At first I thought the play was corny. After performing/talking about it there it was more serious. One rehearsal we watched scenes of Bowling for Columbine. We were all serious after that.

Your Dead

Q: How did you respond to your character?

A: I tried to think about all the things he was going through and how he feels, you have to relate to how he would respond.

Theme of the play: Play is about a problem that is not very present on our country but it is the type of thing that you need to talk about rather than ignore. Theater is the best way to talk about things.

COMING U T BALL

Cross-dressing, Cleavage, and a little class, are the best three words to describe PRIDE's annual fall dance, the Coming Out Ball. With many of Guilford's ladies almost "coming out" of their corsets, duct tape, or plastic wrap, while gentlemen displayed their feminine side in a gown. Some ladies showed they were just as sexy in a pair of overalls, flannel shirt and tie as the guys were in some submissively skimpy outfits themselves (as championed this year by Chris Wells). So we've covered the cross dressing and the cleavage, but where does the class come in?

The Coming Out Ball was graced with the presence of our dear President Kent Chabotar, dean for campus life Anne Lundquist, associate dean of academics Jim Hood, and the associate dean of campus life Jodi Gill, adding just a dash of class and a pinch of authority to keep the dance from blowing up into an orgy. Our fearless leader even had the courage to dance among the cross-dressers, slaves, dominatrix, and skimpy clad freaks.

All in all, PRIDE threw one gorgeous party.

Oktoberfest

This year's Homecoming was just like any other, but with a twist. A German twist named Oktoberfest. The famous festival visited Guilford College for a short while with bratwurst, carnival games, live music, dancing and all around good times, and with root beer instead of the real thing.

The festivities took over Homecoming because this year was the 25th Anniversary of the Munich Study Abroad Program. Both alumni and current students who participated in the program, felt a bit of nostalgia for the land of beer, polka, brats and lederhosen. And for all those whom have never visited the land of Beethoven, Guilford's Oktoberfest have them an irresistible taste of Germany.

Sand Mandala

This year Guilford was graced with four Tibetan monks coming to campus to create a sand mandala. They have been traveling around the world since 9-11 creating such beautiful pieces of work just to dismantle them in the end. They do this to show that as hard as it was they know in the end it will be gone and have to be able to let go. They seem to be saying that you have to learn to let go of things sometimes as hard and difficult as it may see.

They spent four days in the lobby of Dana Auditorium, slowly creating their masterpiece, just to dismantle it and throw the sand into the lake, allowing the sand to travel with the water in accordance with their traditions. The turnout for this even was wonderful, bringing in not only Guilford people but those from the community to see what may not come around again. The ceremony after all was done moved many people to chant along with the monks and to follow them down to the lake to watch the ceremony be completed. This was a wonderful experience for all who attended.

Sidney Poitier

On December 2nd Dana Auditorium was the sight of a flood of ears. Students, faculty, staff, and people from all over Greensboro came to Guilford to listen to stories of personal trials, hardships, and the immortal advice of Sidney Poitier. Poitier was the final speaker for the Bryan Lecture Series this year. He spoke to the audience of his life captured in fourteen different "snapshots."

He spoke of his life as a child in the Bahamas, his arrival in the United States, troubles in Harlem, and the start of his career. Throughout all the "snapshots" an underlying theme began to take form, the underdog. From being born two months premature to being thrust into the unfamiliar hatred of the segregated south at the age of fifteen, from race riots in Harlem to discrimination on Broadway, Sidney Poitier was knocked down time and time again, but he never backed down and always got back on his feet.

After Poitier presented his final snapshot of the evening, he left the audience with words of advice that could only come from the underdog who came out on top, "it doesn't matter how many times we've been knocked down. What matters is what we do with the time after we get back up."

To say the least, Poitier left the audience members with a sense of hope for whatever goals and dreams they might have for the future.

Li, Ashleigh Phelps, Yasmine Fordham, Julia Feitel, Vera Brown, Ryane Moss, Beth Manly, Alison Duncan, Emily Rush and Sarah Marshall

Q: Why do you feel these Monologues are important?
 A: "They let people know about every aspect of vaginas that they would ever want to know and maybe some thing they really didn't. That goes for the good (moans during sex) and the bad (rape)"
 - Ashleigh Phelps

Vagina Monologues

ow: Sarah Marshall: I Was In the Room

The Vagina Monologues are put on every year here at Guilford and is used to help raise awareness of violence against women. When interviewed about their experience performing in these Monologues many of the women had similar answers, as well as differing reasons as to why they chose to participate.

"I've seen the Monologues a few times in my past and always felt better about myself afterwards. It had nothing to do with men, or how other people thought of me, it had everything to do with how I felt about myself! But I still walked away thinking, that's great, but I could never get on stage and talk about my vagina, or even say the word vagina in front of 50+ people. This year was different though, this year, I felt okay about saying the word vagina in public."
-Vagina Miller

"I think that vaginas are just about the coolest things in the world, and they aren't talked about enough"
- Wyatt Scherm-Martin

"In fact if anything, I am not worried or scared about you and your futures. I am more worried about whether or not the world is prepared to deal with such powerful, beautiful, and insightful people."

—Keiqana Withers

"Even if we haven't learned a language here, most of us have had the type of experiences that foster the formation of that "second soul," whether it has been through social activism, collegiate athletics, community service, intense partying or increased exposure to and understanding of other cultures and peoples, or a combination of all of the above."

Well another year has come and gone, this years staff was wonderful, those who helped all year I thank you. For those who could not give more of your time thank you for the time you did give. Special thanks to those who helped this summer. Any and all help was much appreciated. I would like to give thanks to Rebecca Saunders for helping us get things going, Dave Walters and John Bell for providing wonderful Sports photos and to Kaye Miller and Herff Jones for all they have done to help. We will only get better next year. Thank you to everyone who helped and supported us.
